Sponsored by AIESEC United States

All trainees and interns are required to have their DS-2019 validated for international travel if they wish to return to the United States on their J-1 visa after taking a trip abroad.

TRAVEL VALIDATION INSTRUCTIONS:

E-mail Address:

You must meet the following requirements if you would like to visit your home country or any other international destination (including Canada, Mexico, and the Caribbean) while you are on your program:

- The expiration date on your J-1 visa and in Section 3 of your DS-2019 form must not occur before or during your travel outside the United States. If your visa has expired but your DS-2019 form is still valid, you must reapply for a new J-1 visa before you can be readmitted to the United States.
- You must have a multiple entry visa (the letter "M" will be indicated under the word "Entries" on your J-1 visa). If you visa is not a multiple entry visa, you must reapply for a new J-1 visa before you can be readmitted.
- You must have the Travel Validation section of your DS-2019 form signed by AIESEC United States' Responsible or Alternate Responsible Officer.

A travel validation signature is valid for one year from the date it is signed and is good for unlimited international trips. If your program exceeds a year and you intend to travel internationally again more than a year after the original travel validation signature, you must repeat this process before leaving the US.

In order to receive a travel validation signature, you must be in good standing with AIESEC United States. This means we must receive your completed Program Validation Form and all requested evaluations prior to providing a travel validation signature.

Travel Validations can only be done after you begin your program in the United States. Requests for Travel Validations prior to your arrival to the United States will not be granted. Please note that travel validations are not required for domestic travel within the United States.
